

Tu m'en
diras tant!

GUITAR, BOUZOUKI, FOOT TAPPING AND VOCALS

Pascal Ferland

Pascal Ferland, a native of St-Michel-des-Saints in Lanaudière born on May 5, 1977, is a mainly self-taught musician who was a member of the rock group 109 and more recently, the band Hoochie-Koo's, which is when he discovered the joy of performing on stage. Influenced by the Veillette family, he discovered traditional Quebec and Irish music in 2003. He began performing as a guitarist with the group Bouduran, after which he joined Tu m'en diras tant!

ACCORDION, LEAD VOCAL AND VOCALS

Gaëlle Veillette

Born in 1978 and raised in a family where music played a major role, Gaëlle grew up to the sounds of traditional Irish and Quebec pieces. When she was only eight years old, Gaëlle's parents had her take part in their musical activities, where she sang folkloric Quebec songs with an obvious passion. In her early twenties, she began playing the accordion, which provided her with an excellent outlet for expressing her love of traditional Irish and Quebec music.

Valerie Gauthier

Valérie was born in 1980 in a Repentigny family of musicians. While Quebec folklore was generally on the menu at family get-togethers, she was primarily exposed to classical music, and this from a very young age. In 2002, she moved to St-Michel-des-Saints, where she met Gaëlle and quickly became a member of the group Bouduran. The four members of this band, all of whom shared a love of traditional Irish and Quebec music, went on to form Tu m'en diras tant!

VIOLIN, LEAD VOCAL AND VOCALS

Jean-Philippe Kiernan

Jean-Philippe Kiernan, a native of Lanaudière despite a decidedly Irish last name, was born in Sainte-Béatrix in 1979. Music was omnipresent in his home, but it was only at the age of 18 that he discovered traditional Irish and Quebec. This led him to create the group Belzébuth, after which he performed with the country/bluegrass band Les Swompards de l'Est as well as Bouduran, the precursor to Tu m'en diras tant!

BANJO, MANDOLIN, FOOT TAPPING, HARMONICA AND VOCALS

The Group

Fervent and passionate about their art, the members of the group Tu m'en diras tant! invite fans of traditional Irish and Quebec music to share their infectious enthusiasm in an intimate experience that is sure to leave no one unmoved.

Tu m'en diras tant!, comprised of four dynamic musicians, is a young band that melds traditional Quebec music to melodies from the land of Eire. Previously part of the group Bouduran, the four Lanaudière natives decided to embark on a new musical adventure in the summer of 2004 when they founded Tu m'en diras tant!

The members of Tu m'en diras tant! effortlessly convey their love of music through the violin, accordion, guitar, bouzouki, mandolin, banjo, foot tapping and soaring feminine vocals. The group offers a unique musical experience that is both peaceful yet strumming with vitality. With a tone associated to folk arrangements, the group Tu m'en diras tant! enthral their audiences with their combination of lilting and sing-alongs.

The group's first album is a fine indication of what these artists are capable of. Les premières amours, released in the summer of 2007, includes personalized versions of various songs and reels that highlight the innate skills of these fine musicians!

Tu m'en diras tant!, a young and promising group of artists just waiting to be discovered!
